Falling into homelessness means more than losing one's belongings and a place to live. It can lead to a loss of self-confidence and hope for a better life. That's why Freedom House provides far more than food and shelter. We help people overcome the very circumstances that led them to homelessness in the first place. And when we help those in need obtain and maintain the life skills and support they need to succeed, we're not only addressing the crisis of homelessness at its very core, we're providing a real opportunity for change.
